Why does Exploration Foundation ask for my information?

In order to participate in some activities or to volunteer, you may be asked to provide some personal information.

What information does Exploration Foundation collect?

We do not collect personal information from our visitors other than what is supplied to us on a voluntary basis.

Does Exploration Foundation use cookies?

No, we do not use Cookie technology.

How will Exploration Foundation use the information I provide?

We will always explain the extent of its use at the time you are asked to provide personal information.

Does Exploration Foundation rent, share, sell or trade my information?

No. We will never sell, rent, share or trade your information, address, or email addresses with any other organizations. In addition, we do not share information about activities or donations from any of our supporters. Only with the permission of the donor we will publish your level of support on our website. How do I know my credit card information is secure?

Exploration Foundation uses the PayPal system to collect donations from credit cards. The PayPal system uses secure server software (SSL) that is the industry standard and is among the best software for secure commerce transactions. It encrypts all of your personal information, including credit card number or bank account number, so that it cannot be read as the information travels over the Internet. If you were charged for something you didn't purchase, you report it immediately. This may mean someone has used your PayPal account without authorization. As long as you report it within 60 days, PayPal will launch an investigation and you will be covered by PayPal's $0 Liability for Eligible Unauthorized Transactions program. Additionally, under the Fair Credit Billing Act, your bank cannot hold you liable for more than $50 of fraudulent charges. If you suspect an unauthorized charge to your credit card you must:

1. Write to the creditor at the address given for "Billing Inquiries", not the address for sending your payment. You will need to provide your name, address, account number and description of the billing error.
2. Send your letter so that it reaches the creditor within 60 days after the first bill containing the error was received.
